Was Hamlet's mission impossible?

This seminar will be discussing Hamlet as an example of the change from order to chaos in complex social and political structures. The crisis that the "rotten" state is going through and how the young prince reacts to such overwhelming circumstances will be analysed and put into perspective.

Shakespeare forever young

The seminar will be introducing Shakespeare at middle-school level, suggesting suitable classroom activities, including storytelling, drama, drawing and creative writing. It will also present a children's version of The Tempest, and moments of the performance will be brought to life by some actors.

Loving Learning

In this seminar we will discuss and share ideas about self-assessment, an ability which involves a whole set of skills, such as decision-making, organization and self-awareness. We will also look at practical ways to help our students become proactive in the process of evaluation, so that they can develop a feeling of ownership of their learning.

For scuola media and scuola superiore teachers.

Elisa Turri, middle school teacher of English
